Alain Lazier is a lawyer who has just finished his last job and is looking forward to spending some time with his lover, partner, and best friend James. When James breaks up with him over the phone, no one is more shocked than Alain. When he discovers a man he can’t get out of his head playing in a blues club, he goes in just to see him again. Kenny never forgot a chance meeting with Alain years ago…..is the timing right for them to reunite?

Blues in the Night by Christiane France is a sweet love story. Alain is a workaholic who has to learn to slow down and pay attention to life. I think when James, his lover, breaks up with him, it is his wake up call to evaluate just what he really wants from life and seeing Kenny after all this time, really brings it all into focus for him. Kenny though, is in a transitional part of his life; he is finally getting what he has worked so hard for, recognition, and he isn’t sure a relationship, even one as powerful as one with Alain would be, is right for him at this moment in his life.

I liked the emotional angst in this book; it was really true to the characters and made them likeable and real for me. The ending made me smile too. I would say this is the perfect book for when you want a sweet romantic man-on-man book which will make you smile and believe in true love again.
