

Mexican Heat by Laura Baumbach and Josh Lanyon

Contributed by Tina
Sunday, 28 December 2008
Last Updated Sunday, 04 January 2009

Title: Mexican Heat

Author: Laura Baumbach & Josh Lanyon

Publisher: MLR Press

Genre: Crime Suspense

Publication date: November 2008

ISBN: 978-1-934531-05-1

Pages: 272

Series: Crimes & Coctails Mystery series, Book 1

Reviewer: Tina

Heat Level: M/M; Anal Sex; Rimming; Hot man love Rating:Tough, street-smart SFPD Detective Gabriel Sandalini is willing to do whatever it takes to bring down West Coast crime boss Ricco Botelli -- including a dangerous, deep undercover gig as one of Botelli's hired guns by the name of Giovanni Contadino. This mission has places him between the bad guys and a lover when he meets Miguel Ortega when Botelli wants to merge his operations with a more profitable boss. Gabriel meets Miguel and the sparks fly, but when it turns out that both Gabriel and Miguel are more than they seem to be and falling for each other, love becomes a matter of survival for them both. Laura Baumbach and Josh Lanyon bring us two very sexy drug agents in Mexican Heat. Gabriel Sandalini is street smart, sassy and used to working alone. He is also pretty young and not experienced in deep cover missions. Miguel is much more than he seems and he comes off as suave, sophisticated and in control – of himself and his environment. Miguel is much more the romantic in this couple than Gabriel will ever be. And as Miguel would say – Gio do you kiss you mother with that mouth? I love how Ms. Baumbach and Mr. Lanyon bring these characters together with hot spicy sex and dangerous bad guys with guns. I cannot wait to see what is next in Crimes & Cocktails Mystery Series. I know, I for one can’t wait! Bring on the Mexican Heat you will love it!